

Without the lockdown, the tower would've been down

Home About Us Travel Money

A certain Pizzo Lavianzo living in front of the tower of Pisa recently announced to the press that he had achieved the unimaginable: STRAIGHTENING the tower of Pisa a few centimeters. In fact, this former aviator, who had to stop flying after the announcement of a lock down to fight against the COVID-19 pandemic, did not have a break during this global shutdown. Indeed, he shared with us his daily life during the many weeks of lock down. By the second day, after he had already walked many times around his small house located in front of the Leaning Tower of Pisa, in the heart of Italy, in the city of Tuscany, our Pizzo asked himself the famous question, "Why has no one ever managed to straighten the Tower of Pisa?"

The pisa Tour during lockdown

The man with the ambition

You will probably ask yourself how he managed to achieve this exploit. Well, it's very simple: every day, during the times when the population was allowed to stay outside, Pizzo put on some music and placed himself. He maintained his position until he was forced to go home. Scientific analysis has recently been done on the site, the Tower of Pisa has indeed straightened up!

